STATEMENT OF THE GOVERNOR

It gives me great joy to present this report to you. The publication presents the journey from when my administration got into office through our public participation engagements as we determined our priorities and what we have collectively achieved as the people of Narok County. The book, therefore, presents a familiar story because it is ours. Yet, we must tell it because we owe it to ourselves. Sharing this report allows me to give an account of what we have done so far, giving us all an opportunity to continue cultivating a shared vision.

I express my deepest gratitude to the Members of the County Assembly for working with me to deliver the ward development projects.

I welcome you to go through this report and pick lessons and best practices to inform the next round of public engagements as we prepare for the second-year projects.

H.E Patrick K. Ole Ntutu.
Governor, Narok County

INTRODUCTION

This report highlights the projects the County Government has implemented in the first year of H.E. Patrick Ole Ntutu's Administration. It results from an inclusive and collective approach to addressing the needs of the people in Narok County. It is also a product of a collaboration between the County Executive and County Assembly that has seen each ward receive Sh100 million for development and critical recurrent expenditure. It is worth noting that the Sh3 billion budgetary allocation is from the County's revenue.

Sh3 billion
allocated to ward projects

The budget is from the County's own revenue

The objectives of this report are to:

- Provide a progress update to allow the tracking of government projects and promote accountability and open government.
- Measure the progress realised and appreciate achievements and challenges.
- Promote public participation: people with access to information play a more active role in public life.
- Enhance public trust in government and cultivate a shared vision.

A PARTICIPATORY APPROACH TO DEVELOPMENT

The two arms of the County Government of Narok embarked on a transformative partnership that earmarked Sh100 million per ward to drive development and fund critical recurrent expenditures prioritised by the people during public participation. Below is a step-by-step account of the journey that preceded the implementation of the projects.

The approach was anchored on the participatory model of development and the Bottom-Up Economic Transformation Agenda.

“Thank you because when we elected Ole Ntutu, he called for public participation, and we attended. I participated in Ilmotiok. I thank him because the issues we discussed and prioritised as citizens are the things he has implemented.”

~ Charles Olormaitai - Resident, Ilmotiok Ward

“When the Governor was going around the County attending public participation forums, we, the residents of Olopito and neighbouring areas, asked him to build a livestock and barter market at Rrotian. The market is now complete, only awaiting commissioning.”

~ Grace Enole Nakola - Resident, Nkareta Ward

“I wanted to make the resources we have go to the smallest administration unit in Narok County. We agreed with the MCAs that the best way to do it is to look at how much money we have in Narok County. After considering that, we allocated every ward Sh100 million.”

Some of the structures here at Enoosaen Health Centre have been incomplete for many years. We had even lost hope of their completion. I want to thank Governor Ole Ntutu for completing the construction of these structures (outpatient department, staff house, laundry, kitchen and male ward). I have found medical staff working all the times I have come here in the last few months, and there is enough medicine. Ole Ntutu has done a good job" - Jane Enole Momposhi – Resident, Keyian Ward

Nentekey Dispensary

The construction of the Nentekey Dispensary is at an advanced stage. The structure of the outpatient unit is complete, with work going on for the auxiliary units, such as toilets, an incinerator and a connection to water and electricity. Residents have in the past been forced to travel to faraway health facilities such as Nkararo, and the completion and operationalisation of the new facility will enable them to receive timely medical attention.

Enoosaen Health Centre

Enoosaen has in the last few years grown from a sleepy trading centre to a vibrant and rapidly expanding town. This is attributable to many factors but the introduction of sugarcane farming in the area stands out. The town now hosts Transmara Sugar company which has brought on board many staff members. This influx has necessitated the expansion of many services including health. The County Government made a decision to complete some of the structures whose construction was started by the African Development Bank in 2009. The completion of the outpatient wing, staff quarters, laundry, kitchen and male ward will increase the capacity of the health facility to meet the needs of the community. Providing decent housing for medical staff within the health centre is both a morale booster and ensures they are able to attend to emergency situations around the clock.

Nkineji and Ilmotiok

Separated by geography, united by drops of life

Nkineji is located in Siana Ward, where the two main economic activities are tourism and livestock keeping. Ilmotiok village lent its name to the ward stretching to Oloonkerin in the Loita plains. Both areas receive little rainfall and are prone to occasional dry spells when access to clean water becomes challenging. Residents have to trek long distances to water their livestock and fetch some for domestic use. In the case of Ilmotiok, most residents have had to water their animals at Amalo River, a considerable distance from their homes. The Ilmotiok Primary School borehole has a watering point for every villager and pupil and water troughs for livestock. Such is the case at the Nkineji/Oiti borehole. These projects have brought clean and safe drinking water closer to the people of Nkineji and Ilmotiok. They will, therefore, lower the rate of waterborne diseases and, as a result, lighten the burden on public health.

Ololulung'a

hospital

Olmekenyu Dispensary

In the three wards that make up the highlands of Narok South, Sogoo Health Centre is the largest health facility and, together with Ololulung'a Sub-County Hospital, cater for the health needs of most of the residents. It is also noteworthy that the conservation of the Mau forest has led to an influx of former forest residents into the major trading centres in the area. Equipping the existing dispensaries in the three wards and constructing outpatient and maternity wings in others has created a web of health facilities that take the pressure off Sogoo Health Centre and ensure that only referral cases end up at the Sub-County Hospital. Therefore, This web limits the distances that residents have to travel to access quality and affordable health services.

Olokurto Vocational Training College

The Fourth Schedule of the Constitution of Kenya, 2010, mandates county governments to develop, manage and oversee the operations of pre-primary education, village polytechnics, home craft centres and childcare facilities. In discharging this responsibility, the Narok County Government has embarked on constructing Olokurto Vocational Training College. The college will offer certificate and diploma courses in agriculture, carpentry, masonry, plumbing and related courses that will equip young people with knowledge and skills to open personal enterprises and drive the economy.

The college is strategically located in Olokurto, the headquarters of Narok North Sub-County. The County Government is also funding the construction of Sub-County offices, which, together with the college and other infrastructural and institutional developments, will, in many ways, spur business in the area and have a positive impact on the lives and livelihoods of the residents.

Koitiko Primary School

Calling integration by name

Koitiko Primary School is located in Mosiro Ward, Narok East Constituency. It has 25 pupils living with different types of disabilities. The number is vastly increasing because of the school's open-door policy. Since noting that the school has accepted physically and mentally challenged pupils, community members are now enrolling their children. However, teachers say most children have been abandoned, and the school administration left to its own devices. Some pupils need constant medication, while others need devices such as wheelchairs.

On the bright side, integration is slowly taking root in the school, as was evident in the relations among the pupils. Therefore, the dormitory under construction will provide the much-needed shelter and foster integration.

Dry Port-Suswa Water Project

The Project sources water from the Dry Port in Naivasha. Suswa is arid and characterised by porous and loose soil that cannot hold water, ruling out digging dams and pans. Further, groundwater is poor, and one is likely to strike dry wells as it is mainly a geothermal area. Given this, the residents go through great difficulties sourcing water. Therefore, The County Government tapped water from Mt. Longonot serving the EPZ Dry Port in Naivasha to allow Suswa residents to access water in close proximity to alleviate their suffering. The water project covers piping and metering. The is 70% done, with 240 households already connected. The project will be handed over to the Narok Water Company for management upon completion.
